Cosinus - Press Release

NEW SINGLE: COSINUS

From the cold harbor of Hamburg, Alternative Metal architects Wøødhead return with a devastatingly sharp critique of modern existence. Seamlessly blending the raw, driving groove of Nu-Metal with the haunting, atmospheric weight of bands like Deftones, their brand-new single dives headfirst into the crushing, repetitive machinery of the system we live in.

“Again and again, sun and moon repeat.”

The new track is a sonic manifestation of the daily grind—the exhausting, endless loop of a society trapped in consumption and false promises. With lyrics that paint a bleak picture of a "concrete ruin town" where "there's no trickle down," Wøødhead capture the claustrophobia of being chained to the tracks of modern capitalism. Yet, amidst the societal decay, the song explores the desperate search for human connection or a bittersweet anchor: “It seems all these painted walls lead me back to you.”

Handcrafted in the North

True to their DIY roots, the single was entirely produced and recorded in Hamburg. It highlights the band's signature "handcrafted" approach: meticulously layered arrangements, a rhythm section that hits like a mechanical pulse, and an intensely expressive vocal performance that shifts effortlessly between cold despair and explosive defiance.

Wøødhead are no longer just playing within the alternative scene—they are dissecting it. This single is a bleak, powerful, and fiercely honest anthem for anyone who has ever felt like a cog in the machine, looking for a way out.
